“ULTRASOUND-ASSISTED TRIAGE FOR DISASTERS” COURSE

Organized by

Emergency Medicine Unit, Li Ka Shing Faculty of Medicine
The University of Hong Kong

Management of disastrous events often necessitates rapid and accurate triage for a large number of casualties. It is often difficult to derive precise secondary triage decisions with limited understanding of the injury sustained by trauma patients. With the aid of pre-hospital ultrasonography, paramedic profession would be able to exercise clinical judgements critically and effectively in the field.

In this connection, a 1-day practice-focused course namely “Ultrasound-assisted Triage for Disasters” has been developed for paramedical staff of all levels who are dedicated to achieve a higher level of clinical competency. Tailored made to address the industry needs, this course represents one of its kind that is structured and fully taught by clinical professoriate staff of HKU. The course will be delivered via a combination of online study modules, didactic lectures, hands-on practice sessions and simulation training. Interested ASI (HK) members are most welcomed. Details are as follows:-

Date: 9 December 2017 (Saturday)

Time: 08:30 – 18:00

Class Size: 25

Venue: PCB 101, Pauline Chan Building, 10 Sassoon Road, the University of Hong Kong
